

My movements show a story involving a character who has discovered a new object for the first time. Originally this person does not notice this object and the capture begins with some pushups as well as some stretching. Then once the exercise is completed the character goes on a light jog and first bumps into the object. Here they begin to stand on and interact with the object. They stand on it and almost lose their balance when on top of it. They jump with joy due to the excitement received from interacting with the object. Finally, the item disappears and the character falls through the floor and hits the ground.
